Species/ impact	Month	Locality	Total number of trips	Number seen	Caught in all	Method	Unchanged	More	Less	Dont know
Beluga	Apr	Attu	47	110	3	Riffle		X			Whales caught this year are thick. Mainly small (younger) animals indicating that the population is increasing.	The whales are fat due to good food.	Based on current data, quota allocations are not appropriate (not up to date), given the population and nature's own limitations.

Walrus	Apr	Attu	47	74	5	Riffle		X			The walruses are closer to land / coast this year. The stock is noted as rising. Families with one year old cubs are more often observed.	The stock is stable. The size of the stock is considered safe.	It is recommended to change the hunting season to January to April without changing the quota. We do not observe the fight for the female between the walruses, although we sail past them during the winter in January.

Lumpfish	Apr	Attu	47	0	0	Net				X	Although there was a lot of ice, Attu fishermen have been selling more Lumpfish eggs than last year. The size was stable and fishing was stopped before the Lumpfish became small.	Lumpfish usually live in warmer areas and lay eggs in warmer environments. Compared to last year, the size is unchanged, even though new-ice came during fishing.	The 47 day fishing rule applies. In 2019 the law will be revised and Attu is proposing quota fishing instead of the 47 day rule.
